

CRACK ' D

by

Graham Murray
(50 pages)

EXT. HOUSE - DAY

A large modern home squats at the end of a long, gravel driveway.

It is surrounded by dense forests. A single, winding road weaves through the mass of foliage and into the nearby town.

No other houses are visible for miles around.

INT. HOUSE - SAME

KITCHEN

A man, DAVID, and a woman, PAT, both middle-aged, move around the spacious kitchen. It is BREAKFAST time.

A clumping sound from the staircase makes the couple look up.

STAIRCASE

MICA, 19, their daughter, is coming down the stairs one at a time. She is speaking into a cell phone held to her ear with a shoulder.

MICA has spiked, black hair, shorter at the sides. A Gothic look was chosen this morning.

She wears a purple, low-cut T-shirt that reveals not only substantial breasts, but also a silver navel ring, studded at both ends.

Erect nipples are clearly visible through the fabric. Her denim shorts are frayed and faded.

White socks peek above her Doc Martin™ boots, complete with oversized yellow and red shoelaces.

MICA's make-up is heavy and exaggerated: Kohl-rimmed, piercing blue eyes arced with eyebrows drawn on with dark brown pencil.

Her lips are a deep purple, ringed with black eyeliner. A nose ring is attached by a thin silver chain to a series of rings in her ear.

PAT

Morning, sweetheart. Sleep well? You're just in time. Breakfast's ready.

MICA does not look up. She merely waves a hand and continues talking into her phone. Her father looks at her, shakes his head and continues to butter a slice of toast.

DAVID
 God forbid you should walk near a magnet. Half of your face will be ripped off.

MICA rolls her eyes and sighs.

MICA
 (into phone) I'll call you back in a minute, okay? My dad's starting again.
 (laughs) Right. You know it! Later.

She snaps the phone closed and puts it into her back pocket. She picks up a slice of buttered toast and takes a bite.

She glowers at her father.

MICA
 It's silver.

DAVID looks up, his features crossed in disdain.

DAVID
 Sorry? What's silver?

MICA flips her nose chain with a finger. It swings back and forth like a pendulum.

MICA
 This. These. They're silver.
 Not magnetic, dad.

DAVID's expression remains impassive. He shakes his head and continues eating his cereal.

DAVID
 I just don't understand, sweetheart.

MICA Don't sweat it, dad. You'll give yourself a coronary.
 There's nothing to get.
 Anyway, it's the fashion.
 All the girls look like this.

DAVID
 That is fashion? Really?

He briefly examines her outfit, sees the swell of her breasts and protruding nipples. He flushes.

DAVID You're almost . . . naked! How do you girls tell each other apart? Tattoos?

MICA pulls a face then sticks out her tongue.

MICA
Ha-ha . . . Very funny. I am naked. Under my clothes.

Her mother places a stack of pancakes on the table. She stands, hands on hips and looks at MICA.

PAT
You're on that phone 24/7 you know. Don't people talk face to face anymore?

MICA says nothing. Instead, she retrieves her phone and starts tapping on the tiny keypad.

DAVID
Now what are you doing now?
Your breakfast is getting cold.
You really should eat something. Breakfast is the most important meal of the day.
When I was your age--

MICA
Texting.

DAVID, cut short, glances at PAT. She squints and shakes her head, meaning "Leave her alone."

DAVID looks back to MICA, who is still typing.

MICA
Dad, when you were my age T-
Rex was still a real threat.

Her mother tuts her disapproval.

PAT
What are you writing, anyway?

MICA's finger blur across the keypad.

MICA
I'm asking Shauna what time the lecture starts.

DAVID
Why not just call her? Anyway, why do you not know what time your lectures start?

MICA
Texting is more fun.

DAVID
More fun? Than a simple phone call? In my day—

MICA looks up. She tilts her head to one side and pulls a face.

MICA
Uh-huh. In your time, there was no fun.

PAT
You know what your dad meant,
MICA.

MICA dials a number and clamps the phone onto her shoulder again. She fills her travel mug with coffee and grabs a slice of toast.

She kisses her mother on the cheek and heads toward the door. She rubs the top of her father's head with the palm of her hand.

MICA
I have to get going. I'm late.
Bye. See you later.

PAT
Bye, honey. Have a good day.

MICA waves a hand over her shoulder.

DAVID
And stop talking on that phone while you're driving! It's dangerous.

PAT
We may go over to see the Watsons later, honey. We won't be late.

MICA opens the door and turns around.

MICA
Okay. Whatever. Bye.

DAVID
Don't be late for school. You need a degree to—

MICA
Yeah, yeah. I know, dad. To be . . . anything apparently.

The door slams shut.
DAVID and PAT look at each other.

DAVID (sighs) She'll be the death of me, that girl.

Tires squeal in the driveway.
 DAVID winces.
 They continue eating their breakfast as MICA's car accelerates away.

PAT suppresses another laugh, shakes her head.

PAT
 She's a teenager, DAVID. Let her live her life. It'll soon be hard enough. She'll learn.

DAVID
 Yes, I know, PAT. But does she have to--

PAT leans over and kisses the top of DAVID's head.

PAT
 Anyway, she's right. You'll give yourself a coronary, as she says.

They laugh together and continue eating.

EXT. URBAN STREET - DAY

An aging BMW 3-series tailgates the car in front of it.
 A horn BLARES.

INT. MICA'S CAR - SAME

MICA holds the steering wheel in one hand, her mobile phone in the other. She scowls.

MICA C'mon, granddad! Get out of the way already. I'm late!
 (into phone) Sorry, Shaw'. There's an old fart in front of me doing like two miles an hour.
 All I can see is the top of his hat. Damn mouth-breathers!
 They should take the bus!

EXT. URBAN STREET - DAY

MICA's car swerves out, overtakes the car in front and then darts back into its own lane.
 A horn blares again.

MICA
 (into phone)
 There. Go rid of that one.
 Okay, Shaw', I'm almost there.
 See you in a few.
 I've gotta find a parking spot
 now. Shit, I hate this. . .
 What?
 (pause)
 No, I hadn't forgotten. My folks are going out so I'll be there. Just chill. Ciao!

MICA snaps the phone shut and drops it into her purse on the seat beside her.

EXT. COLLEGE CAR PARK - DAY

MICA drives around, looking for a parking spot.
 She is talking on her phone.

INT MICA'S CAR - DAY

MICA is frustrated and anxious. Her head darts from side to side as she looks for parking.

MICA
 (into phone) Shit, Shaw'! There's no parking!
 I'm going to be late. Will you hold a seat open for--What?
 (pause)
 No! I can't park in the staff area! I'll be clamped.
 Or towed.
 I'll just have to keep going round in circles like a goddamn idiot. I'm getting giddy already--Wait!
 There's one! I see one! Okay, gotta go. See you in there!
 Ciao!

EXT. COLLEGE CARPARK - DAY

MICA's car shoots towards an open parking slot where another car is maneuvering to park.

In her haste, her car's rear wheels mount the kerb as she pulls into the spot.

INT. MICA'S CAR

MICA is jolted in her seat as her car bounces over the kerb.

MICA Aargh! Stupid car! It's always doing that!

She parks and gets out. She hurries toward the college entrance.

A VOICE distracts her. She turns around.

A MAN in a car is leaning out of his window. He is angry and waving his arm.

MAN Oi!

MICA stops and looks at him.

MICA
You talking to me, buddy?

MAN
Yes, I'm talking to you! I was going to park there. You saw me. You drove over the damn kerb to steal my spot!

MICA smiles at him and starts to walk away.

MICA
Your spot? Get real, dickhead. It's first come, first served.

She turns her back and continues walking.

A HORN blares LOUD and long.

MAN
I'll report you! Little cow!

MICA keeps walking and raises a middle finger over her shoulder.

She retrieves her phone from her purse and begins typing a message.

INT. LECTURE THEATRE

MICA and SHAWNA sit a few rows apart. They are texting on their cell phones, smiling. Several other students turn to glare at them.

MICA pulls a face at one of them. She waves a hand, indicating them to turn around.

EXT. LECTURE THEATER - LATER

MICA stands near the exit, waiting.

Shawna appears. She is similar in appearance to MICA. They could be mistaken for sisters. Shawna is tall with frizzy blonde hair and legs that go on forever.

Her breasts are about the same size as MICA's. They are barely concealed by the low-cut dress.

MICA bends her knees, feigning a collapse.

MICA

My god! Is that guy boring or what!

SHAWNA

I know! I was falling asleep. What the fuck was he talking about, anyway?

MICA

No idea. I switched off as soon as he opened his yap. He's about as interesting as a train wreck.

Shawna giggles. They walk towards the car park.

MICA

I pity his poor wife.

SHAWNA

Hey! I saw her the other day. She came to fetch him.

MICA

No! Really? What's she like?

SHAWNA

Her butt is like two pigs wrestling under a blanket. She's huge! Humungous!

MICA's eyes fly open wide. She presses her fingers to her mouth then removes them.

MICA

No way!

SHAWNA

Way, girl! I was trying to imagine them--

MICA holds up both arms, flapping her hands at the wrist.

MICA

No! No! Don't! T.M.I! I can't even think about it. It gives me the creeps just the thought of it.

Shawna laughs aloud.

SHAWNA
Imagine that huge butt, bouncing up and down--

MICA
Stop! I don't wanna know. Lala-la-a-a, I can't hear you.

Shawna claps her hands together. Her brilliant white teeth flash as she laughs.

SHAWNA
Eww . . . horrible! His nasty little--

MICA (louder) La la la-a-a . . . Stop already! Enough!

The two girls giggle and swagger as they enter the college car park.

EXT. COLLEGE CAR PARK - SAME

The girls walk until they find MICA's car.

MICA'S CAR

Shawna notices a folded piece of paper under a windshield wiper blade.

SHAWNA
What's this?

She retrieves the paper and opens it. Her eyes widen. She puts a hand to her mouth and hands the paper out to MICA.

MICA scratches through her purse, looking for her keys. She looks up.

MICA
What is it? Another rave going on?

Shawna shakes her head.

MICA takes the paper and reads it.

It says:

"You should have more consideration for others!
You don't OWN the car park. I'll see that the Dean hears about your rudeness and irresponsibility.
Grow up!"

Shawna watches as MICA's face clouds, darkens.

MICA
Fucking little shit! Who the hell does he think he is?

SHAWNA
You know who wrote that?

MICA scrunches up the note and flings it aside.

MICA
Yeah. Some guy got all bent out of shape because I got to this spot before he did.
(pause)
Little bastard even called me a cow!

Shawna fakes surprise. Her eyebrows rise.

SHAWNA
No! Really?

MICA finds her keys and opens her car door.

MICA
Yeah. Started giving me a load of lip, so I gave him the finger and left him to it.

She pauses with one foot on the running board.

MICA
If he wants to park here, he'll have to get up earlier in the morning, won't he?
Argh! People are so . . . stupid!

Shawna smiles and hugs her friend.

SHAWNA
Don't sweat it, girl. This place is full of dickheads like that. One day someone will drag him out of his car and beat the shit out of him.

MICA thinks about this.

MICA
Yeah. Probably. He was kinda big though.
(pause)
Cute, too.

She fakes a devious smile.

With one hand, she makes a fist and brings it up to her mouth. She moves her hand backward and forward while pressing her tongue into her cheek.

Shawna laughs aloud.

SHAWNA
MICA! You're the worst!

MICA smiles as she sinks into the driver's seat.

MICA
Hey! I resemble that remark!

She closes the door and rolls down the window.

Shawna leans on the doorframe.

SHAWNA
Okay. PEPE's at six, right?

MICA nods and starts the car's engine.

MICA
Yeah. But I can't stay long.
It's my sit-in tonight, remember?

SHAWNA
Oh, yeah. I forgot. What's up with that, anyway?

MICA sighs and drops her head onto the padded steering wheel. She bangs her head a few times, inhales deeply and then looks up at Shawna.

MICA
It was my dad's idea. He wants us to be together as a family once a month.
And tonight's the night.

SHAWNA
Interesting. What do you do?

MICA tilts her head to one side and pulls a face.

MICA
The same thing every month.
Basically, it's a dinner and a movie night. Mom cooks something special and then we all sit in the lounge together and watch a movie.

Shawna cups a cheek in one hand and smiles coyly.

SHAWNA
Aw, that's kinda cute!

MICA sticks out her tongue.

MICA
I guess. Except dad always gets to pick the movie.
So it'll be some ancient black and white number. I usually fall asleep and mom has to keep waking me up.

MICA grips the steering wheel, ready to leave.

MICA
Anyway, it keeps him happy.

She taps the steering wheel.

MICA
And he pays for this. So it's not too bad. It's only once a month, thank God.

Mica rolls her eyes.

Shawna stands up and sweeps one arm upwards.

SHAWNA
Okay. Go already.
I'll see you at six.

MICA starts to roll up the window.

SHAWNA
And remember, Phil and Derek may be there. So dress to kill!

MICA winks and closes up the window. Shawna skips away towards her own car.

MICA backs out of her parking spot and slowly moves forward.

INT. MICA'S CAR

MICA scans the car park as if looking for something. She suddenly smiles and brings the car to a halt.

MICA
Gotcha, you little bastard!

EXT. COLLEGE CAR PARK - SAME

MICA gets out of her car. She walks between a row of parked vehicles, swinging her car keys around her index finger.

She stops at the rear of a blue FORD Escort and looks around. Then she turns around and slowly walks towards the front of the car.

CU - FORD ESCORT CAR

MICA's ignition key is in her hand. As she walks, she presses the sharp end of the key against the FORD.

A continuous sliver of paint spirals away from the key. It leaves a deep gouge in the car's bodywork.

BACK TO SCENE

MICA gets back into her car and starts the engine.

INT. MICA'S CAR - SAME

MICA looks in her mirrors, and then grins broadly.

MICA
Call me a cow, huh? Let's see how you like them bananas, buddy!

EXT. COLLEGE CAR PARK - SAME

MICA's car heads towards the exit and turns onto a main road. It is soon out of view.

EXT. WINDING COUNTRY ROAD

MICA's car speeds along the narrow, deserted road. It pulls up behind a slow-moving pickup truck.

BEEP! BEEP! BEE-EEP!

INT. MICA'S CAR

MICA has her mobile phone under her chin. She honks the horn.

MICA
You're not gonna believe this, Shaw'. I'm stuck behind a damn pick-up truck full of--What?
(pause)
Oh, just coming up to dead man's curve.
(pause)
Yeah. I know. I'll get by once we've passed it.

EXT. WINDING COUNTRY ROAD

MICA's car tailgates the pickup truck. Her vehicle suddenly swings out into the path of an oncoming vehicle.

INT. MICA'S CAR

MICA's face shows terror. She straightens her arms and clutches the steering wheel with both hands.

The phone drops from her chin into her lap.

She stamps on the brakes and swings in behind the pickup truck. The oncoming car zooms passed.

BEEP! BEEP! BEEP!

Its horn blares for several seconds.

MICA looks in her mirror. An arm is protruding from the car that just passed. It waves back and forth in a fist. She gulps then stares at the back of the pickup truck.

MICA
(muttering) Fuck! That was close . . .

CU MICA'S PHONE

SHAWNA (V.O.)
Hello? MICA? You okay? What happened?

END CU

BACK TO SCENE

MICA wipes her top lip with the back of her hand. She picks up the mobile phone.

MICA
Yeah. I'm okay. Barely. Some shithead nearly ran me off the road. They drive like idiots around here. Scared the crap out of me.

SHAWNA
You alright? You sound kinda shaken up.

MICA
No, I'm fine. Listen, I'm (more)

MICA (cont'd)
 almost home. I'll call you when I get in. What?
 (pause) Yes, I'll be on time. I just have to shower and get changed.
 (pause)
 No, I won't forget. I'll be to die for. Promise.
 (pause)
 Right. You too. See ya.

MICA smiles and snaps the phone closed. She drops the phone into her lap and concentrates on the road ahead.

EXT. WINDING COUNTRY ROAD

The pickup truck slows then turns onto a small dirt road. MICA's car accelerates.

BACK TO SCENE

MICA's face appears pale. He smile has gone.

MICA
 Finally. Thank you!

EXT. HOUSE - DAY

MICA's car slides to a halt on the white gravel in the driveway. She gets out and walks towards the house.

INT. HOUSE - DAY

MICA closes the door and drops her keys into a basket on a small table. The house is quiet.

She enters the kitchen.

KITCHEN

MICA looks around. The kitchen is spick and span, but deserted.

MICA
 (to herself)
 Strange. I wonder where they are.

She heads toward the doorway that leads to the living room.

LIVING ROOM

Her parents are asleep on the sofa together. DAVID is sitting upright, PAT is lying across his lap.

The television is on, but the sound has been muted.

DAVID snores softly.

MICA picks up the remote control from the table, aims it at the TV set and presses a button. The current program fills the room with sound.

DAVID jerks and opens his bleary eyes.

DAVID Wstfagl?

His eyes focus. MICA stands in front of him. PAT awakens and stretches.

PAT
Oh . . . Hello, sweetheart. We didn't hear you come in.

She stifles a yawn and looks at DAVID.

PAT
Your father must have dozed off. It was so peaceful. I was just resting my eyes.

DAVID is about to protest but MICA cuts him short

MICA
Yeah, right. You were both dead to the world when I came in.

PAT stands up and stretches some more. She stacks some magazines on the coffee table and then looks at her wristwatch.

PAT
Would you like some coffee, sweetheart? I'm going to make a fresh pot. It's only four o' clock.

MICA
Okay, mom. That'll be nice. I have to go shower. I'm meeting Shaw' and the girls at PEPE's at six.

PAT looks almost disappointed.

MICA's expression softens. She walks over and hugs her mother.

MICA
Don't worry, mom. I haven't forgotten. I'll be home before ten. I wouldn't want to miss our special--

She holds up her fingers and draws invisible quotation marks in the air.

MICA
--Family Time.

DAVID stretches out on the sofa. He is still sleepy. PAT winces and shakes her head as if to say, "Don't."

MICA looks at her father and pulls a face. She nods agreement at her mother and leaves the room.

BATHROOM

MICA is in the shower behind glass doors. Music plays loudly. MICA sings along, badly off-key.

MICA'S BEDROOM

MICA enters the room. She is wrapped in a white fluffy towel. Her hair is now light blonde in color.

She removes the towel and sits at a dressing table. Using special tongs, she begins to straighten and dry her hair.

30 MINUTES LATER

MICA is almost unrecognizable. Her hair is now long, straight and golden. Her make-up is perfect, as if from the cover of a Glamour magazine.

She slips on her bra, leans over and shakes her shoulders. Cupping her breasts, she moulds them into shape within the bra.

She looks in the mirror and smiles, then enters the closet. She exits holding a black dress with a white belt.

She holds it against herself and turns left to right, looking in a full-length mirror. She steps into the dress and pulls up the side zipper.

She applies a deep red lip-gloss, places a tissue between her lips and then removes it. She looks in the mirror, pouts her lips and then pretends to kiss the reflection.

MICA
 (whispers) Perfect! Dressed to kill.

BACK TO KITCHEN

PAT is sitting at the table, a mug of coffee cupped in her hands. DAVID is standing at the window, looking out across the yard.

The clip-clop of shoes on the stairs announces MICA's entrance. Her presence seems to light up the room. She is perfect in every way. Young, beautiful and with a figure that most women would kill for.

DAVID turns around. When he sees his daughter, transformed, his face lights up with joy.

DAVID
 Now there's the princess I know and love. You look beautiful!

PAT stands up and approaches MICA. She leans back to take her in.

PAT Dad's right, sweetie. You look positively. . . radiant!

MICA appears embarrassed by this excessive attention.

MICA
 Jeez, mom. It's just a dress.

She shakes her head and approaches the coffee pot.

DAVID
 Well, I like it much better than that vampire look you--

MICA audibly sighs.

MICA
 It's Gothic, dad. It's called Gothic. Not vampire.

DAVID
 Well, whatever you call it. It makes you look like a corpse.
 I mean . . . well, look at you!
 Now that is what a young woman is supposed to look like.
 Not like something that just crawled out of a mausoleum.

He leans against the kitchen sink and folds his arms across his chest.

DAVID You're going to make some young man very happy one day.

MICA glances at a clock on the wall.
It reads 5:20 p.m.

MICA
Well, I'd love to stay and chat, but I have to be at PEPE's by six. I promised Shaw' I wouldn't be late.

She catches the look in the mother's eyes and looks at her father.

MICA
Don't worry, dad. I haven't forgotten about Family Night.
I'll only be there an hour.
Two at the most. I have a project I need to work on.

PAT
All right, honey. You be careful. There's some really bad drivers out there.

MICA opens the side door that leads to the driveway.

MICA
I know, mom. I'm always careful.

DAVID
And keep off the phone while you're driving.

MICA feigns surprise, as if she's been insulted.

MICA
Dad! I'd never do that. That's just so . . . irresponsible!
What do you think I am?

DAVID
I'm just saying, that's all.
Don't be tempted.

MICA's smile betrays her deceit.

DAVID
And don't drink too--

The door slams shut.

DAVID
--much.

PAT
She's a big girl now, DAVID.
We can't protect her every step of her life.

DAVID pushes away from the sink and sits at the kitchen table.

DAVID
I know, darling. It's just a habit.

PAT stands behind her husband and wraps her arms around his neck.

PAT
I know, love. You're a good dad.
(pause)
And husband.

DAVID looks up into PAT's smiling face. They listen as the sound of MICA's car fades away.

PAT raises one eyebrow. Her eyes twinkle.

PAT
We have the house to ourselves for a few hours.

DAVID inhales deeply.

DAVID
Oh, Mrs. Webley! I do believe you're feeling--hmph!

PAT presses her fingers to DAVID's mouth and then one finger to her own. She smiles wickedly.

PAT Shh! Come on, dad. I have something to show you.

PAT leads DAVID towards the staircase. He playfully smacks her rear-end. PAT squeaks and runs up the stairs. DAVID rushes after her.

EXT. WINDING COUNTRY ROAD - DUSK.

MICA's car noses along the road. Her headlights cast deep shadows in the trees that line the road on either side.

INT. MICA'S CAR - SAME

MICA is talking on her mobile phone.

VIEW THROUGH WINDSHIELD

A white, rectangular speed limit sign flits by. It reads 45.

VIEW OF CAR'S DASHBOARD

The car's speedometer reads 55 mph.

EXT. PEPE'S WINE BAR - NIGHT.

The fascia of PEPE'S is comprised mullioned windows. Patrons can be seen inside. Music is heard coming from the wine bar.

An African-American doorman the size of an outhouse stands at the entrance.

He is clad in a penguin suit with bow tie. His hands are clasped loosely in front of him. His bald pate shines in the lights from the doorway.

A car pulls away from the kerb just as MICA drives up. She pulls into the spot. The car bounces as it rides up the kerb and drops down again.

MICA's door opens. MICA steps out. Her long, tanned legs attract the doorman's attention.

He rushes over to assist MICA. His teeth flash gold as he smiles. He extends a hand the size of a bunch of bananas.

DOORMAN

Evening ma'am. Let me help you.

He assists MICA out of her car and is rewarded with a triangular flash of white panties as MICA swings her other leg onto the sidewalk.

MICA

Thank you.

The doorman shuts her door. MICA stops short, then fumbles in her purse. She retrieves a tube of lipstick and slowly twists it.

A dark red column rises slowly out of the tube.

MICA looks at the doorman and winks.

MICA

I won't be a moment. Just need a quick . . . touch-up.

MICA leans over and looks at her reflection in her car's side-mirror.

The doorman stares at the backs of her long, tanned legs and swallows.

DOORMAN
Sure, ma'am. We all need a touch up every now and then.

MICA applies her lipstick, rubs her lips together and stands up. She looks into the doorman's eyes.

MICA
There! Good enough for anything now.

She winks again and allows the doorman to guide her towards the entrance to PEPE'S.

EXT. ENTRANCE TO PEPE'S WINE BAR- NIGHT

MICA and the doorman stand under an awning. She turns to face the huge man.

MICA
Tell me, do you like roses?
Are you a romantic?

The doorman frowns as thinks about this.

DOORMAN
Er, yes. Sure. I like roses.

MICA takes a step closer to the man. She runs a long, painted fingernail down the sleeve of his jacket.

MICA
That's nice. I'm attracted to romantic men. Can you think of anything more romantic than roses on a piano?

The doorman considers this flirtatious question. He affords MICA a smile comprised gold-clad teeth.

DOORMAN
No, ma'am. Can't say I can.

MICA raises her eyebrows, as if waiting for a response. She stands on her tiptoes in order to bring her lips closer to the man's ear.

MICA
I can. How about tulips on an organ?

She turns on her heel and enters PEPE'S.

The doorman's expression clouds, then a broad grin spreads across his face. His shoulders shake as he chuckles.

He resumes his usual position, inserts a finger between his bow tie and neck and loosens it.

INT. PEPE'S WINE BAR

MICA stands at the entrance, her eyes scanning the interior of the room.

The décor is mainly soft, pastel colors with light green and subtle pink interspersed with grey. All tables are occupied.

MICA is attracted by an arm held in the air. It waves.

SHAWNA (V.O.)
MICA! Yoo-hoo! Over here!

MICA homes in on the table where Shawna and two other girls are seated. There is an open seat at the table.
MICA hugs each of the girls in turn and then sits down to join them.

The four girls look similar. Apart from hair length and style, they have similar features, almost identical make-up and the same, impossibly-white teeth.

Each wears a similar low-cut dress designed to show the maximum amount of tanned breast.

MONTAGE

The girls laugh and giggle and whisper in each other's ears as they point to young men seated at various tables around the room.

Waitresses visit their table several times, bringing fresh drinks, some complimentary, from men around the room or sitting at the bar.

Small groups of men stare at the four girls. Their eyes hungrily follow the length of their crossed legs, the swell of their breasts, the erect nipples visible through their dresses.

END MONTAGE

BACK TO SCENE

The girls are still giggling as they exchange the latest gossip and tease young men.

MICA glances at her wristwatch. It reads 8:00 p.m.

MICA
Well, girls. I hate to do this, but I have to go

ALL THREE GIRLS
Awwww! . . .

MICA looks forlorn, yet manages an awkward smile.

MICA
Yeah. I know. It sucks. But I promised my folks I would join them for dinner this evening.

The girls nod in unison, as if understanding exactly what MICA has said.

MICA taps her purse.

MICA Have to do a little bit of work to keep the old money flowing. Know what I mean?

The three girls all nod, flashing their brilliant white teeth between slits of ruby red.

SHAWNA
Mica? How about a quick one for the road. A small glass?

MICA thinks about this. She pulls a face.

MICA
All right. Just a quick one.

Shawna pushes a small glass of white wine towards MICA. She picks it up and drinks it all in one go.

ALL THREE GIRLS
Woo-Hoo! Way to go, girl!

MICA smiles radiantly and stands up. She wobbles.

MICA
Whoa! I felt that one!

SHAWNA
Whoa! You okay to drive?

MICA
Oh, yeah. I've been worse.

MICA kisses each of the girls on their cheek and stands beside Shawna. They hold hands as they walk toward the door.

Shawna's brow knits as she turns to face MICA.

SHAWNA

Aw, girl! I really wish you could stay a bit longer.

MICA

Yeah, I know. Me too. I quite fancied the guy with the 49ers sweatshirt. Did you see the bulge in his trousers?

SHAWNA

Yeah! I did! Whew.

She fans herself with a hand.

SHAWNA

Wouldn't mind a bit of that. Maybe I'll invite him over to join us. There's a free seat now.

She smiles at MICA and winks. MICA's mouth droops as she mimics a child about to cry.

MICA

Without me?

Shawna laughs.

SHAWNA

Nah . . . next time. They'll be back. We'll get them next time. If you can cope with blue balls.

MICA laughs.

MICA

No problem, girl. Soon have 'em shiny pink and . . . explosive.

The girls giggle as they approach the exit to the wine bar.

EXT. PEPE'S WINE BAR - NIGHT

MICA exits the wine bar.

The doorman immediately approaches her, grinning like a snake.

DOORMAN

See you to your car, ma'am?

MICA looks him up and down. She shrugs.

MICA

Sure. Why not.

The doorman holds out the crook of his arm. MICA slips her arm through his. He guides her towards her car.

MICA's gait suddenly falters.

DOORMAN
You're a little bit wobbly, ma'am. Are you okay to drive?

MICA looks up at him.

MICA
It's not the wine, fool. It's these heels. And my name's MICA, not ma'am. You make me sound like the fucking Queen of England or something.

The doorman looks down at MICA's 4 inch heels. Red-painted toenails poke through the open-ended shoes.

DOORMAN Right. Sorry. Hi, MICA. I'm WINSTON.

MICA suppresses a snort.

MICA
Naturally.

WINSTON does not appear to hear her

AT MICA'S CAR

MICA presses the remote control to unlock her car. The doorman opens the door.

MICA turns and sits in the driver's seat, her long legs still on the sidewalk. They shine like polished brass in the evening light. This does not go unnoticed.

MICA slowly lifts her right leg and places it inside the car. Her legs are now spread apart.

She looks up at the doorman, notices his eager gaze.

MICA
You're kinda cute, WINSTON.

Despite his coloring, the man appears to flush.

WINSTON
Er, thanks.
(pause)
I, er, get off at eleven.

MICA continues to fix him in her gaze. She slowly blinks twice.

MICA Ye-es? And?

WINSTON
And I'm off on Tuesday nights.

He swallows and strokes his chin, as if he were grooming a goatee beard.

WINSTON
So, how about you give me your number and I call you some time?

MICA's teeth flash white in the gloom of the street. She slowly lifts her left leg and places it on the running board.

Her skirt rides up, exposing the maximum amount of brown thigh. Her ankles are as thin and delicate as a sparrow's legs.

MICA
Tell you what?

WINSTON (eagerly) What?

MICA
How about I call you?

WINSTON looks from MICA's long legs to her eyes. He smiles as broadly as he can.

WINSTON
All right! That works for me.

MICA puts her other leg into the car. WINSTON closes her door. MICA starts the car and looks up at him. He looks almost drugged.

MICA rolls down the window a few inches - not enough that WINSTON can get his head in. She holds up her hand and wiggles her fingers at him.

MICA Buh-bye . . .

She shoots a quick glance over her shoulder and then pulls out of the parking place faster than necessary.

WINSTON watches her leave. His expression suddenly changes as realization dawns.

He runs into the road, waving his hands.

WINSTON
Hey! MICA? I didn't give you my number! Hey! Wait! Shit!

EXT. WINDING COUNTRY ROAD - NIGHT

MICA's car picks its way along the winding road. Occasionally, the car drifts across the center line and then drifts back again.

It runs onto the hard shoulder, kicking up clouds of dust and then veers back onto the road again.

INT. MICA'S CAR - CONTINUOUS

MICA is talking on her mobile phone. Soft music plays from the car stereo. She blinks hard a few times, as if to clear her eyes.

EXT. WINDING COUNTRY ROAD - NIGHT

MICA is traveling 90 degrees to a vehicle approaching from her right. A sharp curve lies a few hundred yards ahead.

She leans over to change the CD in the car stereo. The mobile phone slips from her shoulder and drops to the floor.

MICA
Shit!

EXT. VIEW INTO CAR THROUGH WINDSHIELD.

MICA's face is suddenly lit up by a bright light. She squints against the glare of it.

INT. MICA'S CAR.

MICA raises a hand to shield her eyes from the searing lights of a car that has just come around a tight curve.

EXT. WINDING COUNTRY ROAD - NIGHT

MICA's car glides over the central dividing line.

EXT. VIEW INTO CAR THROUGH WINDSHIELD.

MICA's eyes fly open with fear. She grips the steering wheel, tries to move back into her own lane.

INT. MICA'S CAR

She turns the steering wheel to the right with one hand. A loud CRUNCH as the oncoming vehicle passes by.

EXT. WINDING COUNTRY ROAD - NIGHT

Two cars slide past each other, inches from a head-on collision.

INT. MICA'S CAR

MICA gains control of the vehicle. She negotiates the tight right curve and stops the car.

EXT. WINDING COUNTRY ROAD - NIGHT

MICA's car is stationary in the middle of the road. The headlights pierce the blackness ahead.

INT. MICA'S CAR

MICA is frozen with fear, her hands gripping the steering wheel. She stares straight ahead. Her breathing is fast.

She puffs out her cheeks and blows.

MICA
Fuck me! Stupid idiot!

She pulls over and parks on the hard shoulder. She leans back in the seat and closes her eyes.

EXT. WINDING COUNTRY ROAD - NIGHT

MICA's door opens. She steps out.

MICA'S CAR

She is unsteady and supports herself against the door. She walks the fifty or so yards back towards the curve in the road, wobbling in her high heels.

The road is deserted. No taillights. No lights.

She stands with hands on hips, staring down the road. She sees nothing. Crickets chirp all around.

She brushes some loose hair back behind her ear, turns around and walks back towards her car.

MICA'S CAR

MICA approaches her car. She groans and holds her head. She walks to the driver's door and examines the side mirror.

The mirror is folded back against the body of the car. She pushes it back out. Several pieces of broken glass fall to the ground.

MICA

Jesus! He actually hit me! And didn't even stop! I could have been killed!

She runs a hand over the top of the broken mirror.

MICA

Oh, Christ! Dad's gonna be pissed about this!

She gets back into the car and sits, staring out of the windshield. She suddenly laughs.

MICA

Woo-Hoo! What a fucking trip!

She looks up.

MICA

Somebody up there loves me!

Still smiling, she starts the engine and stomps on the accelerator. The tail of the car slides on the dirt of the hard shoulder.

Tires squeal as they suddenly gain purchase on the blacktop. The car speeds away into the night.

EXT. HOUSE - NIGHT

A vehicle appears in the driveway. MICA's car slides to halt in front of the house.

INT. MICA'S CAR

MICA is talking on her mobile phone.

MICA

Okay, Shaw', I'm here. Their car's not in the driveway. Maybe they went out.

(pause)

No, they don't usually go out. Sometimes they go to the Watson's place. But not tonight. Not on Family Night. What? Yes, I'm alright.

EXT. MICA'S CAR

MICA alights, still talking on the phone. She is smiling and giggling. She slams the car door closed and walks toward the house.

CU GROUND BESIDE CAR

Shards of glass from the broken side mirror fall to the gravel. They twinkle in the moonlight. MICA does not notice.

End CU

INT HOUSE - KITCHEN

MICA enters the kitchen, phone pressed to her ear.

MICA
Hang on a sec', Shaw.

She presses the phone to her chest.

MICA
Mom! Dad! I'm home!

She waits for a reply. There is none.

MICA
(into phone)
Nah, they're not here. Maybe they went to—Oh, hold on. I see a note on the fridge.

MICA walks over to the fridge. She pulls off a yellow Post-It™ note.

It reads:

MICA, Have gone to get popcorn. Dinner's in the oven. We won't be late. Love, Mom XXX

MICA
(into phone)
Get this shit, Shaw'. They've only gone to get popcorn!
(pause)
Yes! Fucking popcorn!
(she listens)
Nah. My dad likes that shitty theater stuff. You know, the one that smells like feet with all that sickly butter on it?
(pause)
I know! It's crap! But he insists on having it when we watch a movie. Silly old fart.

MICA opens the fridge.

CU FRIDGE INTERIOR

A white casserole dish sits on a shelf. A yellow Post-It™ is stuck to the foil top.

MICA winces.

MICA
Fucking hell . . . Shaw'?
My mom's only gone and made meat loaf.
(pause)
Yes, meatloaf! That crap made from peckers and hooves. Yuk!
(pause)
No! I hate it. Listen, I'm starved. I'd better get something to eat.
(pause)
I'll call you later. Ciao!

MICA closes the phone and places it on the kitchen table. She removes the casserole dish from the fridge and lifts one corner of the foil.

MICA
Yummy! My favorite. Thanks, mom.

She ladles a chunk of the meatloaf onto a plate and puts it in the microwave. She looks out of the window while the food reheats.

CU wall clock

The clock reads 9:02 p.m.

End CU

DING! The microwave chimes.

MICA retrieves her dinner and selects a fork from the cutlery drawer. She heads for the living room.

LIVING ROOM

MICA settles on the sofa and kicks off her shoes. She picks up the remote and switches on the TV.

Her mother's handbag sits on the table.
MICA snorts.

MICA
(to herself)
Huh. She'll forget her own head one day.

She settles back and watches a wildlife video while she eats the meatloaf.

LIVING ROOM - TWO HOURS LATER

MICA is lying to one side on the sofa, asleep. An empty plate lies on the floor.

DING! DONG! The doorbell rings.

MICA jerks awake. She sits upright and looks around the room.

She glances at her watch. It reads 11:05 p.m.

DING! DONG!

MICA
Shit! Now what?

She stands up and heads towards the front door, unsteady on her feet.

Her hair on one side is mussed from sleeping.
She yawns.

ENTRANCE HALLWAY

MICA looks towards the stairs.

MICA
(shouts)
MOM? DAD? Where are you?

She stops as she notices the blue and red flashing light reflecting from the hallway walls.

She walks over to a small window and pulls aside the curtain.

A police patrol car is parked in the driveway. An officer walks around MICA's car.

He bends down, out of view.

DING! DONG! DING! DONG!

The doorbell is more urgent.

MICA
I'm coming! I'm coming! Enough already! Jeez!

She yanks open the front door.

A female police officer stands on the doorstep.
A male officer approaches from MICA's car.

MICA's expression is blank. She looks from the officers to her car.

MICA
Yes? Can I help you?

POLICE WOMAN
Miss MICA Webley?

MICA frowns. She looks suspicious.

MICA
Yes, that's me. My parents are not here.

The policeman joins his colleague on the doorstep.

POLICEMAN
Actually, it's you we've come to see, Miss Webley. I am Sergeant PHILIPS and this is my colleague, Constable ATKINS. May we come in, please?

MICA
Why? What's happened?

Constable ATKINS steps forward. Both officers have their hats tucked under their arms.

ATKINS
If we can just come in, Miss.
We have some rather disturbing news.

MICA looks rattled, her eyes panicked. She looks from ATKINS to PHILIPS.

MICA
Tell me. What's happened. Is it my parents? Tell me.

Her voice is pleading, almost desperate.

PHILIPS
Miss Webley? Please? Can we step inside?

MICA looks at the officers. She opens the door fully and walks into the living room.

The officers follow her.

PHILIPS closes the front door.

LIVING ROOM

MICA stands in the center of the room, her arms folded across her chest.

The officers notice the discarded plate on the floor of the otherwise pristine room.

MICA

Okay. What's this all about?

She looks at a wall clock. It reads 11:30 p.m.

Officer ATKINS glances around the room.

ATKINS

You may want to sit down,
Miss.

MICA pulls a face. She is not impressed by the officer's rote dialogue.

MICA

I'm fine, thank you. I just woke up. I'm MICA. Not Miss.

ATKINS

Of course. Sorry . . . MICA.

ATKINS glances down briefly then up at MICA.

ATKINS

I'm afraid there's been an accident. Your parents--

MICA turns on her heels. She throws her arms in the air.

MICA

I knew it! I just knew it.
I've told him a hundred times not to drive at night.

She looks at officer ATKINS.

MICA

His eyes aren't as good as they used to be, you know. But will he listen? No. He keeps--

ATKINS

MICA, listen to me. Your father was not driving. Your mother was driving.

This stops MICA's diatribe.

MICA

My mom was driving?

ATKINS

As far as we can tell, yes.

(pause)

I am sorry to have you tell you that your parents did not survive the incident.

MICA's arms drop to her sides. She stares at officer ATKINS, then at officer PHILIPS.

MICA

Sorry? What did you say? What incident?

Her bottom lip quivers as this information registers. She sways gently on her feet.

ATKINS swiftly steps forward and grabs MICA's elbow. She guides her to the sofa.

MICA slumps down. Her eyes are fixed and staring.

MICA

Dead? My Mom and dad? They're dead?

ATKINS sits beside MICA. She nods.

ATKINS

I'm very sorry, MICA. But yes.
Your mother died at the scene and your father passed away en route to the hospital.

MICA eyes dart between the two officers.

PHILIPS' expression is blank, non-committal.

MICA's eyes well as she turns to face officer ATKINS. A tear runs down her cheek and drops into her lap.

Officer PHILIPS notices a box of tissues on the coffee table. He pulls free a handful and offers them to MICA.

She takes them without looking up.

MICA

What . . . What happened?
Where? When?

ATKINS

We don't have all the details yet, MICA. But it looks like it may have been a Hit and Run.

MICA's expression looks hunted.

MICA
What? Someone killed my parents and then just . . .
drove off?

ATKINS
As I said, we don't have all the details yet . . . but, possibly.

MICA's mouth hangs open in shock. Her eyes search ATKINS' face.

MICA
Where did it happen?
(pause)
When?

Officer PHILIPS steps closer.

PHILIPS
Can I ask you, MICA . . . which way did you come home tonight?

MICA looks up at officer PHILIPS.

Her eyes are vacant, like an automaton, a result of shock as she attempts to process the information.

MICA
What? Oh. There is only one road here. FM137

PHILIPS
Right. And did you notice anything . . . unusual on your way home?

MICA stares at PHILIPS. His expression reveals nothing.

MICA
No. What do you mean by unusual? It's a long, boring road. And very dark. There's nothing to see.

PHILIPS nods.

PHILIPS
Yes. It is. I'm only asking as this is where the . . .
accident occurred. It's a very dangerous road. Requires concentration, especially at night.

MICA is aghast. She sits back in the sofa.

MICA

What! I just drove on 137. I didn't see anything. I only saw one other car all the way. Some kids driving like maniacs.

PHILIPS

Really? Do you recall what time that was?

MICA runs her fingers through her hair.

MICA

Er, . . . I'm not sure. About 8:30, I guess. Why?

She looks at PHILIPS, hoping for a clue to his line of questioning.

PHILIPS

We're just trying to ascertain what happened. You see, the accident occurred on FM137. It seems your mother swerved to avoid something and lost control of the vehicle.

MICA's expression turns blank. Her eyes are fixed on officer PHILIPS as he speaks.

PHILIPS

Their vehicle left the road and . . . well, as you know, there is a steep bank either side of that road and . . . their car went over the edge and hit a large tree.

Officer ATKINS places a hand on MICA's arm to get her attention.

ATKINS

We haven't found anything to indicate a collision with another vehicle. There's not even any skid marks.

ATKINS searches MICA's face. She sees only alarm.

ATKINS

All we've found so far is some broken glass.

MICA frowns.

MICA

Broken glass?

Officer ATKINS nods.

ATKINS

Yes. Broken mirror, actually.
Very odd.

(pause)

We have forensics out there now collecting the pieces. I'm sure they'll be able to tell us what it is and where it's from.

PHILIPS sniffs. MICA turns to face him.

PHILIPS

That reminds me, MICA. Is that your car in the driveway?

MICA gawks at the officer.

MICA

What? Yes. Of course it's mine. Who else's?

PHILIPS

I was just asking. Only I noticed that your side-mirror is broken.

MICA's eyes widen almost imperceptibly. She glances at ATKINS, who smiles sweetly.

MICA

Oh. . . Yes. I know. I meant to have that fixed. Sorry.

PHILIPS

It's all right. I know how expensive they can be to replace. How did it happen?

Another tear streaks down MICA's cheek. She wipes it away with the back of her hand.

Her cheeks flush. She appears angry.

MICA

I'm sorry? I've just been told that my parents have been . . .
. are DEAD . . . and you want to know about a broken mirror.

PHILIPS

I'm very sorry, MICA. We're just trying to gather as much information as we can. If this was a Hit and Run well . . .
it's a serious crime.
It could even be construed as murder.

(more)

PHILIPS (cont'd)
So, if you don't mind helping us, how did your mirror get broken?

MICA stares blankly for a while. She sniffs.

MICA
Murder? Really?

PHILIPS nods.

PHILIPS
Could be. We shall have to wait and see if forensics come up with anything.
(pause)
Anyway - you were saying.
About the side mirror?

MICA regains her composure.

MICA
Oh, I . . . I don't know. A week ago. Ten days maybe. I don't really remember.

PHILIPS
Right. And . . . did you hit something?

The hunted look returns to MICA's expression.
She turns to officer ATKINS.

ATKINS
It's all right, MICA. It's just routine questions.
We have to ask about anything out of the ordinary.

MICA's eyes now show a modicum of her usual arrogance when faced with authority.

MICA
No. It happened in the . . . supermarket. It was like that when I came out. I guess someone hit it while they were parking. Probably some old lady in her Town car.

ATKINS
Like your parents'?

MICA
What?

ATKINS

You mean a Lincoln Town car?
The same kind your parents drive.

MICA

Yeah. This town's full of them. Little old ladies everywhere.

PHILIPS

Must have been a white one,
then.

MICA turns to PHILIPS.

MICA

What? How could you possibly know what color it was?

PHILIPS

Oh, I had a look just now before we came in. The back of the mirror has white paint on it.

MICA stares at PHILIPS. She looks back to ATKINS.

MICA

Could be. I wouldn't know. I never noticed that.

PHILIPS picks up the handbag from the table.

PHILIPS

This yours?

MICA looks at him.

MICA

No. It's . . . was my mom's.

More tears roll down MICA's face. She dabs at them with a tissue.

Officer PHILIPS opens the handbag. He withdraws a purse, opens it.

PHILIPS

She left her I.D. behind. Is that usual?

MICA watches PHILIPS as he flips through the purse.

MICA

No. Not really. I guess she just forgot. They left a note for me. Said they'd gone to get---

She drops her face into her hands and sobs.
Officer ATKINS rubs her back to console her.

ATKINS
It's okay, honey. Everything will be all right.

ATKINS looks up at PHILIPS and nods.
He returns a wan smile.

PHILIPS
We had a bit of trouble tracking you down actually.

MICA looks up. Her cheeks are streaked black from mascara.

MICA
What . . . what do you mean?

PHILIPS
Well, the license plate on your parents' car is registered to an address in Wisconsin.
(pause)
So is his driver's license.

MICA
Oh, we moved here recently.
About three months ago. I guess he just never changed
it.

PHILIPS waits patiently in case MICA wants to add anything else.

MICA watches PHILIPS. She frowns and then looks at ATKINS.

MICA
So . . . how did you find me,
then?

ATKINS and PHILIPS exchange glances.

ATKINS
Well, sweetie, as we said, your dad passed away en route to the hospital . . . but he was semi-conscious and did manage to say a few words.

MICA's face lights up a little.

MICA
He did? Really? What did he say?

ATKINS takes MICA's hand, holds it.

ATKINS
Actually, he said your name.

MICA's eyes widen.

MICA
He did? My dad?

ATKINS nods.

ATKINS
Yes, honey. He said your name and "at . . . PEPE's . . . with friends."

MICA's eyes well with tears again. They roll down both cheeks.

ATKINS
And then he said something really strange.

MICA frowns at ATKINS.

MICA
Strange? How do you mean, strange?

ATKINS
Well, according to the EMS attendant your dad said, "I saw her. Tell her to keep off that phone."

MICA's eyes are now fixed on officer ATKINS.

PHILIPS
Have you any idea what he meant by that?

MICA looks at the phone on the table near the door.

ATKINS' and PHILIPS' eyes follow hers.

MICA
I . . . I don't know. Maybe they were going to call?

PHILIPS looks back at MICA. Her face is flushed.

PHILIPS
Yes. That must be it. Except .
. .

MICA waits for him to continue.

PHILIPS
Except . . . if he meant that phone--

PHILIPS points to the telephone near the door.

PHILIPS
--wouldn't he have said the phone and not that phone?

MICA's face clouds in confusion.

MICA
What? What are you talking about? I don't know what you mean. What difference does it make?

PHILIPS waves a dismissive hand.

PHILIPS
Oh, I was just thinking out loud really. I'm sorry.

ATKINS pats the back of MICA's hand.

ATKINS
Anyway, an officer was sent over to PEPE's wine bar.

She looks at MICA and smiles.

ATKINS
I used to go there when I was a teenager.

MICA manages a lopsided smile.

MICA Really?

ATKINS
Yeah. It was a cool place.
Especially to meet boys.

ATKINS smiles at the memory.

MICA's expression softens.

MICA
It hasn't changed.

ATKINS
Anyway, the officer we sent over spoke to the doorman.

A trace of fear suddenly crosses MICA's face.

ATKINS

WINSTON. His name is WINSTON.
He said he remembered you.

MICA flushes, looks uncomfortable.

MICA

I bet he did. I was just having a bit of fun. You know?

ATKINS nods.

ATKINS

Of course I do. I used to tease the boys myself when I was your age.

PHILIPS replaces the purse in the handbag.

PHILIPS

WINSTON says he remembers you because of what you did.

MICA looks up at PHILIPS. She appears confused.

MICA

What I did? I didn't do anything. I just teased him a bit is all.

PHILIPS shakes his head and smiles.

PHILIPS

No, I don't mean you did anything wrong. WINSTON was referring to what you did when he helped you out of your car.

MICA's brow furrows.

MICA

I still don't understand.
You're not making any sense.

PHILIPS

Well, WINSTON says you applied some lipstick before you went into PEPE's.

MICA is incredulous.

MICA

Are you serious? So I put on some lipstick. So what? I wanted to look good before I went in. Is that a crime now?
Putting on lipstick?

PHILIPS waves his hands to waylay a further outburst.

PHILIPS
No, no. Nothing like that.
Sure you wanted to look good.

ATKINS
A girl's gotta use whatever she's got.

PHILIPS laughs.

PHILIPS
Yes, and don't yall know just how to do it, huh?

Officer ATKINS smiles at MICA and winks.

PHILIPS
No, what I was getting at was how you put on your lipstick.

MICA is confused again. She looks to officer
ATKINS for support.

ATKINS raises her eyebrows and shrugs.

MICA
The way I put it on? It's lipstick! You just . . . put it on! It's not rocket science.

MICA makes to stand up but officer ATKINS gently presses on her arm. She moves her head as if to say 'no'.

MICA sighs and leans back in the sofa.

PHILIPS
I wouldn't really know. I do like watching my wife when she puts on her lipstick, though.

MICA looks at PHILIPS. Her expression is bland.

PHILIPS
She always uses one of those .
. . what do you call them?
Those little round things that pop up? With the powder in?

MICA sighs.

MICA
A compact. They have a mirror inside--

MICA stops abruptly and glares at officer PHILIPS.

PHILIPS smiles, but it lacks warmth.

PHILIPS
Yes! That's it. A compact.
Anyway, my wife says she can't put on lipstick unless she has a mirror.

ATKINS shrugs her shoulders again.

ATKINS
I have to admit, I can't either. I'd end up looking like Buffo the Clown!

She sniggers.

ATKINS
I'd get lipstick all over the place.

PHILIPS
My wife says so, too. She has to use a mirror.

PHILIPS pauses as he watches MICA. MICA stares at him, her face now a rictus of disbelief.

PHILIPS
WINSTON said you used a mirror, too.

He watches MICA closely.

PHILIPS
Your car's side mirror.

MICA's face registers fear. She stares at PHILIPS for a few seconds.

Then she falls over towards officer ATKINS and buries her face in the officer's shoulder, weeping uncontrollably.

PHILIPS steps forward.

PHILIPS
ATKINS, I really think we should continue this conversation at the station, don't you?

Officer ATKINS strokes MICA's hair. She looks up at PHILIPS and nods.

EXT. HOUSE - NIGHT.

A single police car drives away from the house.
Its blue and red lights cast colors onto the tree-lined driveway.

EXT. ROAD FM 137 - NIGHT.

Down a steep embankment, police and fire department personnel busy themselves around a car wreck. A white scene-of-crime tent has been erected on the road.

The front of a white Lincoln Town car is folded around a large tree. The windshield is lying on the hood. The vehicle appears otherwise unscathed.

A police officer walks around the car and halts at the driver's door. The wing mirror is flattened against the body of the car. The black plastic backing is streaked with red marks.

He looks up and whistles to an officer at the top of the embankment. The officer turns around.

FIRST OFFICER
Get forensics down here!
I've found something.

INT. SCENE OF CRIME TENT.

Crime investigator BRODY, is hunched over a small table. He examines several fragments of glass that he has tried to reassemble.

A woman, CARMEN, approaches him.

CARMEN
Well, BRODY? Anything yet?

BRODY looks up at her. He smiles broadly

BRODY
Yeah. Piece of cake this one.

He flips over a sliver of broken glass with a pencil.

BRODY
Take a look.

CARMEN looks at the piece of glass. She glances at BRODY and grins.

CARMEN
Lucky dog!

BRODY
Yep. Some days are diamonds.
This piece even has the manufacturer's serial number on it. See? Says "Bavarian Motor Works." Clear as day.
(pause)
Fancy some dinner?

CARMEN looks at the broken glass fragments and then at BRODY. She smiles at him again.

CARMEN
Sure, BRODY. Why not. I reckon we're all done here.

EXT. FM 137 - OVERHEAD - NIGHT.

A single patrol car, lights flashing, approaches the scene of the car wreck. It does not stop.

Its blue and red lights illuminate the dense trees that line the lonely road.

It disappears from view. The road is in darkness.

FADE OUT.